

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Dr. Revilo Pendleton Oliver, Professor of the Classics at the University of Illinois for 32 years, is a scholar of international distinction who has written articles in four languages for the most prestigious academic publications in the United States and Europe.

During World War II, Dr. Oliver was Director of Research in a highly secret agency of the War Department, and was cited for outstanding service to his country.

One of the very few academicians who has been outspoken in his opposition to the progressive defacement of our civilization, Dr. Oliver has long insisted that the fate of his countrymen hangs on their willingness to subordinate their doctrinal differences to the tough but idealistic solidarity which is the prerequisite of a Majority resurgence.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM *AMERICA'S DECLINE

On the 18th Amendment (Prohibition): "Very few Americans were sufficiently sane to perceive that they had repudiated the American conception of government and had replaced it with the legal principle of the 'dictatorship of the proletariat,' which was the theoretical justification of the Jews' revolution in Russia."

On Race: "We must further understand that all races naturally regard themselves as superior to all others. We think Congoids unintelligent, but they feel only contempt for a race so stupid or craven that it fawns on them, gives them votes, lavishly subsidizes them with its own earnings, and even oppresses its own people to curry their favor. We are a race as are the others. If we attribute to ourselves a superiority, intellectual, moral, or other, in terms of our own standards, we are simply indulging in a tautology. The only objective criterion of superiority, among human races as among all other species, is biological: the strong survive, the weak perish. The superior race of mankind today is the one that will emerge victorious—whether by its technology or its fecundity—from the proximate struggle for life on an overcrowded planet."

FREEDOM OF SPEECH-FREEDOM OF THOUGHT FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor-publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change or replacement by the will of the people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

Ecologists, as they now call themselves, have long been concerned over the chemical pollution of land, air, and water in industrial nations and the ever accelerated depletion of natural resources throughout the entire globe. Aside from some shameless exploitation of this concern for political and subversive purposes, the ecologists' fears for the future are justified, and one could wish that they dared say frankly that a principal cause of what they deplore is simply the overpopulation of this planet as a whole and of countries such as the United States in particular. If the world is not to become eventually uninhabitable, an intelligent race, interested in its own survival, must find a way to arrest the noisome pollution of its environment by the fantastic proliferation of anthropoid refuse within its own borders and in territories that its own people could advantageously colonize.

That problem, posed by an undeniable fact, is grim indeed, and every possible solution of it is certain to be highly unpleasant and even horrible, but it is one that intelligent men will face rationally. It is, of course, entirely beyond the comprehension of persons whose minds have been hebetated by prolonged use of ideological narcotics, Christianity, "Liberalism," and similar forms of childish sentimentality.

A recent flurry of concern was caused by the unverified report that a very low form of organic life had been detected in the soil of Mars, which induced unjustified speculation that Mars may once have been an inhabited planet on which all complex forms of life had been destroyed by a progressive desiccation caused by the consumption of such plants as the forests on which the habitability of the earth depends. And although attention was then focused on the rapid destruction of the great rain forests of the Amazon to clear land and build towns for irremediably inferior and useless species of bipeds, the depletion of other forests was, of course, relevant.

One is saddened by the waste of trees to produce paper that will be covered with drivel and the verbalized nonsense that gives the thoughtless the illusion that they are thinking. Two examples of such waste have just been scattered around this country by the "German Information Center" in New York, the propaganda agency of the disreputable gang that now governs Germany. But there is truth in the aphorism that there is no book from which a critical reader cannot learn something. Whether that something is worth the time it takes to read the book is, naturally, a quite different matter.

Common Values, Common Cause: German Statesmen in the United States, American Statesmen in Germany, 1953-1983, is, as one would expect, a maladorous mass of the gobbledegook that politicians in a "democracy" utter as naturally as locusts stridulate, and, except for a few geographical terms, the 202 pages of "statements and speeches" might have been productions of the speech-writers in the White House. It is adorned with pictures that show German scoundrels conferring with American scoundrels. It would not be right to say that the various Chancellors and Presidents are plotting together, because all the scheming has been done for them by higher powers, but, to judge from the pictures, they have a good time exchanging off-color jokes and winks.

If a diligent reader were to sort out and examine every bit of the verbal garbage about "partnership for peace," "commitment to democratic ideals," "cooperation for progress," and the like, he might be able to find some traces of the constant deterioration of Germany from the time of Adenauer to the time of Kohl. Each puppet has represented something a little worse than did his predecessor.

Indefatigable optimists, who hoped that Helmut Kohl might mark the beginning of some slight amelioration of conditions in Germany, should have learned from that individual's conduct during the visit of the leading South-African scoundrel, Pieter Botha, to Germany, as reported in the official Week in Germany for 8 June. With the insolent vulgarity of "do-gooders" and their Puritanic itch to meddle in other people's business, Kohl demanded the abolition of apartheid in South Africa and hastening of the glorious day when the savages there will start exterminating white men. His Foreign Minister, Genscher by name, carried on the work of insulting South Africans and our race in general by yapping for "independence" for the sub-humans who infest the deserts of what he called "Namibia," i.e., South West Africa. Needless to say, Kohl and Botha winked at each other as they went through their act, and chuckled as their infamy was covered by turning loose hordes of presumably German zombies, who howled with indignation because Botha, supposedly the representative of a white nation, had been allowed to visit the ruins of Germany. But the episode of the visit made it more clear than ever that Kohl and Botha are both puppets that are manipulated in a single Puppenspielerei.

The volume of printed tripe, however, will remind some of us of the cautious hopes we entertained in Adenauer's time. He was, so far as was known, a German, although he was doubtless supervised by the Jewess to whom he was married, and he was obviously in a position that was extremely difficult and, if he was an honest man, heart-breaking. So far as one could judge from visits to Germany during those years, he did his best, within the limits of his authority, to give the conquered nation hope for its future in the part of the dismembered country that was under his jurisdiction. And he certainly exercised some restraint on the ferocity of the Jewish conquerors to an extent that became obvious only in later régimes, when the parasite race began more boldly to display its unappeasable hatred of civilized mankind. He also presided over the "economic miracle" of German recovery from the devastation and slaughter wrought by the Jews' janissaries in the Suicide of Europe. That, to be sure, was a great achievement, but one that was made possible by the innate character of the Germans who survived the great catastrophe and belonged to a generation that had not had its brains addled by American barbarians, officially called "educators," who zealously undertook the work of sabotaging the minds of German children. It was not so much of a "miracle" as it appeared to Americans, who had already been trained to regard work as a hardship to be avoided except when it is a dire necessity and proof that one is "under-privileged."

We, who know what conspiracies accomplish on every scale from the boodle that is normal in even a small town to the world-wide operations of the innately conspiratorial race, are perhaps excessively inclined to suspect that subtle and long-term planning contrived events that greatly further the work of our enemies, whereas in reality all that may be involved is their proficiency in exploiting every opportunity for depredation that chance offers them, just as pickpockets take every opportunity to snatch wallets surreptitiously. We must be wary, therefore, and not leap to a conclusion when we observe that Adenauer's "economic miracle," by exploiting the superiority of German industry, created a shortage of labor, which led to the importation of swarms of incompatible aliens, chiefly mongrels and other dregs from the biological cesspools of Asia Minor,* who, with their often even more mongrel offspring, now clutter up Germany, where the industrial boom has been ended by the growing superiority of Japan. The offspring of the refuse have for years polluted the German schools, to which they were foolishly admitted, and in some places they were actually so numerous that German children became a minority, while German children everywhere, like children in the United States, were exposed to corrupting contact with lower forms of human life. Now some Germans are trying to hire the creatures to go home, while feeble-minded Germans talk about making citizens of some of the scum, and the Genscher mentioned above officially yelled for the "social integration" of the refuse as a "top priority" of his government, so that German taxpayers will be forced to finance the increasing pollution of their country, while they also support the two and two-thirds millions of Germans who cannot find work because their places have been taken by the imported riff-raff, which numbered 4,600,000 in 1982 and was increasing at the rate of 650,000 a year.

In his treasonable talk about "integrating" the "minorities" in Germany, Genscher merely repeated what was said by Helmut Schmidt, when he was the Flügelmann called Chancellor in 1982 and jabbered about his "long-term goal" of "integrating" the parasitic enemies "permanently into the mainstream of society." If Germany were still a nation, the problem of the "minorities" could be solved very quickly, given the well-known efficiency of the German railroads, and Herren Schmidt, Kohl, * In 1982, when there were only 4,600,000 of the imported aliens in Germany, by far the largest number were classified as "Turks" which means only that they came from the part of Asia Minor that is under Turkish government. So far as I know, no attempt has been made to determine their racial composition, and we must rely on the impressions of Germans and visitors to Germany who have observed the aliens whom they encountered or saw in action. That they are mostly dregs from the mongrel population of the territory from which they come is shown by the efforts made by the Turkish government to prevent their return to Turkey. Germany is to be made what the United States so happily became, a dumping ground for the world's racial garbage.

and their coadjutors could be given a special coach at the end of some train.

But Germany is not a nation, and so long as her territory is ruled by the shabbat goyim in Bonn, the dwindling population of Germans will have to walk through streets that are filthy with walking garbage. So now you see clearly the result of Adenauer's "economic miracle." And you have before you a question of historical causality that it behooves you to ponder carefully. When Germany was permitted to make the economic recovery that amazed the world, did the Jews permit and foster that recovery for the specific purpose of producing the result that has now occurred? Or did they permit the hated Aryans a measure of economic prosperity only so that they could extort from them forty billion dollars as "reparations" for their fictitious Holohoax, and only later discover how the influx of foreign "workers" could be used to hasten the final liquidation of the Aryans in Germany and thus leave God's Race free to start in earnest on the Aryans in other parts of the world?

How much was forethought and long-range planning by the enemies of mankind and how much was only their opportunism, ever alert for a chance to plunder today with no thought of the morrow? He who can feel certain of his answer to that question will be, as the French say, bien fine.

The Federal Republic of Germany in the 1980s is another bundle of buncombe, consisting of the lucubrations of four "experts," one of whom, Robert Gerald Livingston, who now adorns the John Hopkins University, edited the whole. I need not tell you that expert Szabo, who is the Professor of National Security in a mare's nest called The National Defense University in the District of Corruption, assures you that Kohl is regarded by "analysts" as a great conservative, just like Mog Thatcher and Ronnie Reagan. All that reminds me of blatteration by a "political scientist" I heard when I was a youngster: he "analysed" what he called "the great climacteric" in the Soviet, when that "genial Liberal, Trotsky" was overcome and expelled by the "reactionary conservatism" of Stalin.

Szabo is cuter, however, when he assures us that "The 'Americanization' of West Germany represents a Westernization of German life, with the result that West Germany is a completely Western country for the first time in German history." If you didn't gag on that one, try this really cute twist: "Reinhard Lettau's pamphlet, US=Täglicher Faschismus and Ernest Nolte's comparison of Vietnam with Auschwitz were, as the historian [sic!] Hans Gatzke had written, examples of attempts which were motivated unconsciously by the hope of mitigating Germany's own past crimes.' By bringing America down to the level of Nazi Germany, many Germans could relieve some of their own guilt."

That reminds one, of course, that the shameless little hirelings who now govern Germany are determined to rub the Jews' excrement in the face of every Aryan. In Germany today, the Jews do not even need to use their own terrorists, as they still do in the United States, where they totally destroyed the Institute for Historical Review in Torrance, California, in the early morning of the Fourth of July, a date selected to show their contempt for their American curs. In Germany, the Jews let the German police do their work for them in terrorist raids on individuals and publishers suspected of having books that displease Yahweh's Chosen Bandits by failing to endorse their Big Lies, especially their Holohoax.

It would require too much space even to list the outrages against civilization perpetrated by the pirates of Bonn, but the measure of German degradation is shown by the action of the University of Göttingen, once a respected institution of higher learning, when it "revoked" the doctoral degree of Dr. Wilhelm Stäglich, who offended God's Race by publishing a veracious account of what actually happened at the Auschwitz that Szabo mentioned (doubtless with a smirk) above.

Now we should clearly understand what that implies. For writing a truthful book, Dr. Stäglich was forced from the office of Judge in Hamburg, which he had held for twenty years. That, of course, was within the powers of an uncivilized government. The German police raided the offices of the publisher of Dr. Stäglich's Der Auschwitz Mythos and destroyed all copies of the book; that was within their power, just as they could have murdered the publisher and his staff. But what the academic rabbits in the University of Göttingen attempted was something no human being could do. A learned degree, an earned doctorate, is a record of academic achievement and, unless it was demonstrably obtained by fraud, cannot be revoked, anymore than the Jews, much as they would like to do so, can revoke the crossing of the Atlantic by Lindbergh in 1927. The contemptible shysters of Göttingen knew that, but they had simply lost all respect for facts. One can only wonder that they did not think of revoking Dr. Stäglich's birth-certificate. That would have enabled their Professor of Demography, if they have one, to prove conclusively that Dr. Stäglich never existed and therefore that the offending book could never have been published, so reports of it must be the work of 'Neo-Nazi' plotters, who should be crucified for spreading such false reports. That would have been a really neat job and might have earned for them the highest academic honor in their conception, that of kissing a Jew's godly buttocks.

If you read the German press—no, what I really mean is the newspapers that are printed in the German language in the territory ruled by Bonn, newspapers generally owned by the international parasites or their stooges, which gleefully report the crimes against civilization committed by the Jews' barbarian mercenaries who are the government in Bonn, you will soon come to take the motto nil admirari and you will wonder at nothing they may do, however outrageous or absurd.

In the August issue of Instauration, a well-known American conservative of some academic standing, who hides his identity under the pseudonym "Cholly Bilderberger," gives a circumstantial report of a case which, he says, is now in the German courts. According to Bilderberger, two Kikesses who were lunching in a restaurant in Stuttgart told each other what blessings their race had bestowed on the Semites of Palestine by grabbing their country. They saw a young German at a neighboring table, a man named Oberkirchen, raise his right eyebrow a distance said to be between five and seven millimeters, i.e., approximately between three-sixteenths and nine thirty-seconds of an inch. Now raising an eyebrow is a gesture that indicates irony, and if Oberkirchen was ironic, that meant he was guilty of the crime of doubting something said by one of God's Master Race. Oberkirchen was tried for "anti-Semitism" and sentenced to six years in prison, but, according to Bilderberger, has been granted bail while appealing his conviction to a higher court.

Now you and I will suspect Bilderberger of rather heavy-handed and somewhat juvenile satire. But, given the unspeakable nest of traitors in Bonn and the utter shamelessness with which they now operate, how the Hell can we be sure? If Bilderberger invented that story as a sarcastic parody, its very crudity makes him a failure as a satirist, but he may compensate himself with the mantle of prophecy: he merely described what Bonn is quite likely to do next year or the year thereafter or as soon as its owners get the idea.

In January 1981, Liberty Bell carried a leading article by Allan Callahan, "John Lennon: Good Riddance," describing the psychic devastation of Aryan youth wrought by the calculated menticial filth purveyed over the "electric Jew," as television is aptly called, by the deceased degenerate and his fellow Beatles, on whom—I should say more correctly, on which civilized men had failed to step in time. Lennon, it will be remembered, was condignly eliminated by pesticidal bullets from a gun held by one of his innumerable victims.

No one should have been astonished by an article by Jack Martin of the Copley News Service, which appeared in many newspapers on 22 April 1984. It was only natural for Lennon to fancy himself another Jewish messiah, come to destroy civilization for the benefit of his malignant race. According to one of Lennon's confederates, quoted by Martin in the article, Lennon convened a special board meeting of his gang and announced, "I have something very important to tell you. I am Jesus Christ come back again. This is my thing."

Of course!

It is relevant and worth noting that the same issue of Liberty Bell contains a cogent article by an anonymous author, entitled "The Whiteman's Guidebook." Its grim realism is a lesson every man of our race needs to learn above all else. Look up that number of Liberty Bell in your file or obtain the offprint, which is still available from the publisher.

In 'Populism' and 'Elitism' (p. 25, n. 27), I commented briefly on the morbid envy, malice, and blood-lust that inspired Julia Ward Howe to write the words of "one of the most terrible songs ever sung," the perennially popular "Battle Hymn of the Republic," which, I hope, owes its popularity to the stirring music she filched when she set her words to it.

THE AGONY OF EASTERN EUROPE

by
Revilo P. Oliver

After the Jews captured and occupied Russia in 1917-18 and, with the help of their Slavic dupes and subjects, extended their Bolshevik rule over the greater part of what had been the Russian Empire, their new barbarism was separated from Western Europe by a belt of six nations that had resisted attempts to occupy them. Finland, the three Baltic states (Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania), and Poland, which had been territories of the Russian Empire, won their independence. Romania, although its royal family was a branch of the Hohenzollern, had been an ally of Britain and France and so emerged from the First World War as one of the lesser victors.

Finland and the Baltic states established republican and more or less democratic governments. The three smaller nations were militarily helpless and placed their hopes for survival on fatuous dreams of enduring peace. Finland, with a population that was less than two-thirds as large as that of the three Baltic states, retained the native vigor that enabled it to astound the world by its brilliant defeat of the massed might of the whole Soviet Empire in 1939-40. It was also noteworthy as the only European nation which paid its debts to the United States. That, however, won it little sympathy from a nation that holds to the "democratic" principle that honesty, or a plausible simulation of it, is the best policy when it is good for business.

Poland became independent under a military dictatorship headed by General Pilsudski, who had led a revolt against Russia in 1914 and, with his Polish Legion, fought as an ally of Germany and Austria during the greater part of the First World War. Under Pilsudski, who knew that what counts in this world is force, not talk, Poland resisted Bolshevik efforts to invade her territory and the attempts of Wilson, Lloyd George, and Lord Curzon to sell her out to the Soviets at the "peace" conferences in Versailles in 1919. She decisively defeated the Jews' Bolshevik armies, which were under the overall command of Leib Bronstein, alias Trotsky. She regained her old frontiers with Russia and profited by the annexation of territory from Germany, Austria, and Lithuania.

Unlike the more northern nations, Poland was aware of the Jewish problem. The Poles had long resented their swarming parasites, whose depredations, by usury and corruption, were to some extent the cause of the distress of the peasantry and the demoralization of the middle and upper classes. But although the Jews in Poland wailed about the horrible persecution they suffer whenever their open or covert control is not absolute, the Polish government took no effective measures against the aliens, who, naturally, went to work at once to undermine the resurrected nation. The continued dominance of Jews in Polish commerce, industry, journalism, and education bottled up an explosive force that was released by the German conquest, during which the German army found itself in the position of having to protect Jews from retaliation by Poles of the middle and lower classes.

The Jews took their revenge, largely by exploiting and exacerbating the really insoluble problem of the "Polish corridor," which had been created at Versailles to maim Germany; the Poles naturally wanted to retain it, while Germany needed it to end the bisection of her territory. The Poles were thus cozened into accepting against Germany obviously nugatory guarantees by the Jews' stooges in England and, secretly, the United States, which were, of course, made to use Poland as a pretext for starting the Jewish war against Western Civilization in 1939, and indubitably made with the intention of betraying Poland as soon as the cat's paw had served its purpose.

Romania—the name is variously spelled in English, 'Roumania' and 'Rumania' being the most common forms, but I adopt here the spelling used in the book, The Anti-Humans, to which I shall shortly refer, which is also the spelling in Romanian. Romania, I say, as an adherent of the victorious Allies in the First World War, profited from a large accession of territory from the Hungarian part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, and regained her province of Bessarabia, which had been ceded to Russia in 1878 and had revolted in 1917 to avert occupation by the Bolsheviks. (The name of the province was probably derived from that of the Bessarabs (Bazarabs), the princely family that ruled Walachia and Moldavia from the Fourteenth to the latter part of the Seventeenth Centuries; it has nothing to do with Arabia. )

Like Poland, Romania was deeply infested with Jews, and as soon as she was free of Turkish suzeranty, she tried to limit their control and exploitation of her people. She was several times forced to yield to strong intervention on behalf of the Jews by Great Britain, France, and Germany, and after 1918, Britain and France and the United States continued to champion the international race that was even then engaged in surreptitiously subjugating them.

In lands adjacent to the six buffer states, Judaeo-Bolshevik take-overs were narrowly averted after 1918: in Germany, by action of the veterans of her armies, who, however, permitted the establishment of the Weimar Republic, which was even more thoroughly honeycombed and controlled by the Jews than had been the monarchy under Wilhelm II. Their power was augmented by the rancorous hostility toward Germany of Britain, France, and, so long as Wilson was nominally President, the United States, and it was further consolidated by the economic chaos of the planned inflation, which made German currency valueless and enabled the Jews to

INTRODUCTION

The author of this book, a Romanian born in Greek territory, went to Romania for his university education and there became a member of the anti-Communist organization that flourished in that nation before and during the tragic and fratricidal Second World War. After the Bolshevik conquest of Romania, the Soviets, undoubtedly on orders from their masters, maintained a pretense that their occupation was merely temporary and further disguised their purposes by keeping on the throne as King of Romania the legitimate heir, a young man who was merely a puppet in their hands, but served to give to the people an illusive hope that Romania, though devastated and impoverished, might again become a free nation. In this hope, of course, the Romanians (like many other captive peoples) were encouraged by the governments of the Western nations that had won the military victory. Those governments, especially in the United States, maintained a pretense that they were not the servants of the Bolsheviks' masters, and, whenever they deemed it expedient to administer a little verbal paregoric to their own population, manufactured oratory about "defending the Free World" and "containing Communism." Americans, who were so charmed by those phrases that they did not notice what their own government was doing, cannot blame the Romanians (or the others) for having supposed that the official verbiage was an indication of national policy.

During the early years of Soviet occupation, therefore, the Romanian people entertained delusive hopes of eventual liberation, and the author of this book accordingly remained in Romania, his true fatherland. When he was at last arrested and imprisoned on suspicion of holding opinions inimical to Bolshevism, he, luckily, suffered only the excruciating tortures and hardships that are normal in what is called a Great Society. During his imprisonment, however, he had by chance an opportunity to learn of an experiment conducted on a select group of young men, and he had the acumen and patience to discover precisely what that experiment was. In this book he discloses for the first time the facts about a practice of which the peoples of the West still know nothing.

Bacu speaks only of what he knows — of what he witnessed with his own eyes and learned from the lips of men who had, despite themselves, been stripped of their humanity by an infallible scientific technique. His subject, therefore, is what the Bolsheviks secretly did to human beings in the prison at Pitesti* from 1949, when the experiment began, to 1951, when it seems to have been temporarily discontinued for some reason unknown.

What is described in these pages is not, however, an isolated event. Everyone who has had experience in military intelligence dealing with the Bolsheviks, or who has made a close study of information that is available from little known but authentic sources, will recognize in Bacu's pages a detailed description of a technique that the implacable enemies of mankind have used in many lands — perhaps in all countries that are officially Communist — for many years. The military intelligence agencies of Western nations have long known that a film demonstrating basic Pavlovian procedures was produced in Russia for training the Bolshevik secret police in 1928, and that the intelligence service of at least one nation succeeded in obtaining a copy of that film. After the notorious "purge" trials in Russia in 1936, when the masters of that country for some reason thought it advisable to exhibit to the world their ability to elicit the most incredible confessions from highly-placed and hardened Bolsheviks, intelligent observers naturally wondered what means could have been employed to produce such amazing results. Certain Western intelligence services sought to ascertain what means had been used, and eventually ascertained them in sufficient detail to show that the essentials of the method were precisely those that Mr. Bacu has described for us.

*With the exceptions of names of places (e.g., Bucharest) and persons (e.g., King Carol) that have well-known English forms, Romanian proper names in this volume are given in their Romanian spelling, but without the diacritical marks that are used in Romanian. To avoid excessive expense in setting type, the use of these marks had to be restricted to actual quotations from Romanian and the index, to which the reader is referred for the exact form of names and titles requiring diacritics.

Military intelligence services naturally do not publish what they have learned by their secret and often perilous operations. Perhaps the first hint of the new method given to the general public came from George Orwell, who, in his 1984, portrayed the internationalists' Utopia and described some parts of the Communist technique, eliminating much that was too realistic for the taste of the reading public at that time, and replacing it with some episodes that could give a dramatic touch to what was in reality unspeakably vile and interminably monotonous. From 1984, however, an alert reader could have surmised much that was left unsaid. Since then, confirmatory evidence has become available from many sources, often fragmentary, for victims who have the stamina to tell what was done to them may nevertheless be understandably reticent about the worst aspects of the degradation imposed on them. They often censor their reports, to avoid harrowing unendurably the feelings of a humane reader or arousing total disbelief in tender-minded individuals from whom miseducation or innate sentimentality has concealed the ultimate horrors that lie hidden in creatures anatomically indistinguishable from human beings.

It almost never happens that we have a report from a survivor who at the time observed and interviewed the piteous victims of scientific bestiality, but, by a lucky chance, himself escaped the traumatic and mind-destroying shock of the torments they had undergone. That is what makes the book here translated from the Romanian unique. Bacu, to whom we owe our only authoritative report on the "Pitesti Phenomenon,"* was such a survivor.

In these pages, the reader will, for the first time, have at his disposal a fairly complete account of Bolshevik techniques of dehumanization, including some details, here mentioned as delicately as possible, of which we do not like to think. On these, Bacu does not insist, but you will see their import. One aspect concerning which he is silent is the sexual torments that form a standard part of the Bolshevik method. That is a large omission, but scholars who have had the fortitude to study the works of the celebrated "Marquis" de Sade† and his peers will readily perceive what was involved, while a specific report here would not only sicken most readers, but would prevent the distribution of this book through the United States mails.‡

This account, as I have said, deals with prisons in Romania, but the procedures used there have been and are used wherever †Donatien Alphonse Sade (1740-1814), to whom we owe the word sadism, was condemned to death by French courts for rape, murder by poison, and almost unbelievable torture of persons whom he kidnapped for that purpose, but the execution of the sentence was delayed by strange influences until he was liberated from prison by the French Revolution, during which he was honored and admired for his orations about "equality" and "brotherhood." Napoleon had him put in an insane asylum.

‡[Mr. Heath did not anticipate the full effect of decisions by the Supreme Court in Washington. the anti-humans have gained control. Identical procedures, together with such improvements as may have been suggested by their experiments and delights in Romania and other captive nations, will be used everywhere that their power is extended — including, of course, the United States, if that nation reaches the goal toward which it is presently moving at a vertiginous speed.

If the Americans succumb, they will remember this book as a prophecy that was completely fulfilled.

* * * * *

Apart from its value to Americans as foreshadowing things to come — certain to come, if the operations now in progress in the United States are carried to a successful conclusion — this book, although not couched in the technical terminology of psychology and psychiatry, should be of absorbing interest to everyone who, regardless of his political desires or prognostications, is sincerely interested in study of the human consciousness. It delineates the result of a crucial experiment that could not have been performed on Occidentals outside Soviet territory.

This book is a landmark in the broad field now generally designated by a term adapted from the Russian, psychopolitics.

Psychopolitics, a technology rather than a science since it is a practical application of data obtained by research in several sciences, may be defined as the art of controlling a nation by controlling the minds of the politically dominant majority of its population.

As a designation, psychopolitics is preferable to psychological warfare, which, though correct, is often taken to mean only operations directed against an enemy nation in the course of armed conflict. An excellent example of such propaganda attacks is President Wilson's famous "fourteen points," a group of fairy-stories about the peace and justice that the American Santa Claus had in his bag for good little boys and girls in Europe.* That high-sounding nonsense, which seemed plausible to persons addicted to idealistic fantasies and romantic fiction, is credited with having broken the will of the German people and induced them to surrender in 1918, after which, of course, it was easy to inflict on them suffering and starvation, Bolshevik outbreaks, and finally a monetary inflation so enormous that the international people then in Germany could "legally" appropriate most of the property in Germany that they had not already acquired, "legality" being observed by handing a few American dollars to famished and despairing Germans in return for land, buildings, or factories worth a thousand or a million times that price.

The "fourteen points" are justly regarded as one of the great triumphs of psychological warfare, but under modern conditions verbal bombardments, unlike artillery fire, cannot be aimed in one direction. Clever as the "fourteen points"

*It is probably true, but irrelevant, that Wilson half-believed himself when he spun his rhetorical fantasies; if he did, he was selected for the presidency precisely because he had that capacity for self-intoxication. Colonel Curtis B. Dall in his excellent book (F. D. R., Tulsa, Oklahoma, 1967, p. 137) reports that a prominent Jew, who had been an eye-witness and a kind of errand boy for his elders, boasted that in 1912, while Wilson was being trained for the presidency, Bernard Baruch, one of the great Jewish satraps stationed in the United States, used to lead Wilson about, "like a poodle on a string," and make him recite at Democratic Headquarters, while Baruch's fellows were egging on Theodore Roosevelt, whose candidacy, of course, ensured the popular votes for Wilson needed to make Wilson's appointment seem "democratic." We may be sure that Fido Wilson learned how to sit up and speak "new freedom," "make the world safe for democracy," and the like to the satisfaction of his masters and trainers before they had him perform before the footlights for the edification of Americans who imagined that they had selected (elected) him as their Leader. What Fido thinks while he responds to his cues and performs on the stage is of interest only to Fido's biographers and to psychologists.

were, we may legitimately wonder whether they would have made the German populace simpler, if the populace had not been made susceptible to such gabble by the long and patient work of enemy aliens and their hirelings. What is more significant, substantially the same drivel was used, through Wilson and other mouthpieces, to pep up the American people and make them glad to furnish cannon fodder and money to "make the world safe for democracy" by devastating Europe in a "war to end wars." Wilson's ideological barrage was directed against Americans as much as against Germans, and we may wonder which nation, in the long run, was the more damaged.

Under modern conditions, psychological warfare is necessarily waged by a government against its own subjects and only secondarily against a foreign country, and the real beneficiary is invariably the international nation that controls both sides in the war that it has arranged for its own purposes. Only if we keep that fact in mind can we use the term psychological warfare correctly.

The tactical and strategic use of psychopolitics that the Soviet recommends to its allies and agents in the United States and other nations of the West yet uncaptured has been set forth in a remarkable document of which several copies appear to have reached the United States in the 1930's and later. It is most widely known and generally available as a booklet, Brain-washing, a Synthesis of the Russian Textbook on Psychopolitics, with an introduction by the Reverend Mr. Kenneth Goff, who was a member of the Communist Party in the United States from 1936 to 1939, and who had studied psychopolitics in a special Communist training school in Milwaukee. He states that the textbook, although issued for the use of English-speaking students in Lenin University, was also "used in America for the training of Communist cadre." An almost identical text was obtained from a confidential source in 1955 by a Professor Charles Stickley of New York City and published in that year.* A quite similar text, with only minor variations, came into the possession of Mr. Louis Zoul, the well-known author of Tbugs and Communists, who published in The Soviet Inferno the greater part of the text divided into short sections, each of which is followed by copious corroboration from many sources, such as Anatoli Granovsky's I Was an NKVD Agent and Captain Robert A. Winston's The Pentagon Case, as well as letters from individuals who escaped from Cuba and other proletarian paradises.†

In the publications before Mr. Zoul's, the text is preceded by a commendatory address, evidently delivered at Lenin University by Lavrentiy Beria, the Jew who was Head Butcher in the Russia satrapy from 1938 — when he liquidated another Jew, the unspeakable Yezhov — until 1953, when he was in turn liquidated by another and even more ferocious Jew. The date of the oration is not given, but it would seem to be earlier than 1938 and to come from the time when Beria, in addition to feeding his blood-lust in Transcaucasia, was presiding over the manufacture of "historical studies" for the use of educated simpletons in the United States and elsewhere.

The "synthesis," which deals with the uses of psychopolitics rather than technical details, is obviously a condensation and omits most of the Marxist jargon with which admittedly Communist publications for the general public are almost invariably *Mr. Goff's booklet is available from Soldiers of the Cross, $1.00. It is hard to tell which of the many other printings are still in print. One, containing an excellent introduction by Eric D. Butler, the well-known Australian publicist and editor of the New Times of Melbourne, was published by the Victorian League of Rights in Melbourne, Victoria, in 1956, then priced at 4/-. Another, with a foreword discussing the Soviet textbook as an obvious source of the "mental health" agitation in the United States, was published at about the same time by the American Public Relations Forum, Burbank, California; $1.00.

larded.* It does, however, maintain the pretense, discarded only on the very highest levels, that psychological warfare against Western nations is directed from Moscow in the interests of Russia, and that the goal is the destruction of "capitalism." The text, though candid enough in treating the American people as enemies who must be destroyed or enslaved, was evidently designed for students who would forget that the Bolshevik capture of Russia was, of course, planned, financed, and directed by the Schiffs, Warburgs, and other wealthy Jews then living in the United States, who used their control over the governments of Germany, Great Britain, France, and the United States to ensure the Bolsheviks' triumph *Marxist doctrine, though very useful for befuddling low-grade minds (which normally accept as profound any highly touted mass of intricate verbiage that they are unable to untangle), is believed only by the lowest ranks in the Communist hierarchy. As Duane Thorin perceived when he was a prisoner of the Communists in China (A Ride to Panmunjon, Chicago, 1956; p. 39): "Intellects that failed to see through the falsities of communism were so arrested that they were of only limited use in the totalitarian state." Persons with such inert minds are, naturally, not promoted to really responsible positions, no matter how hard they work or how sadistic they are. The policy of denying them promotion, which is certainly sound from an organizational standpoint, has led to some defections — which are of no real consequence, since the dullards do not know very much to reveal and they are easily replaced — although, where circumstances make it convenient, such tools are usually scrapped and liquidated when they begin to show discontent or claim promised rewards — as you will see in Chapter XXVIII of the present book. In the middle echelons of the organization, comparable to company-grade and field-grade officers in an army, the ambitious career men, naturally too intelligent to take their own propaganda seriously, are careful to use the official "ideology" even among themselves, partly for exercise in unremitting hypocrisy, and partly because they find Marxist dialectics a game as entertaining as chess. This sport, which may be played for high stakes, gives rise to clever syllogisms about "deviationism," "Stalinism," etc., which often trap the players. A good example may be found in the work of the Soviet physician, J. Landowsky, available in a Spanish translation, Sinfonia en rojo mayor (Madrid, 1949), of which one chapter has appeared in English, translated by George Knupffer, Red Symphony (London, 1968).

over the Russians.† The students were also expected to believe or pretend that "capitalism" included the international lords of finance, who have always found their Soviet colony an extremely profitable investment both in itself and as a means of exploiting their control over the money and banking of nations that are told that they are "free."

The text of Brain-washing‡ deals primarily with means of inducing insanity or idiocy in selected victims and is thus †Pretense is often dropped on the highest levels in talks with outsiders who are too well informed to be deceived. Prince Sturdza, in the authentic text of his memoirs (see the footnote on p. xxxv below) pp. 346 f., reports that when he came to New York in 1929 to obtain a loan for the Romanian government, he had to plead his country's case with the mighty Jewish lawyer who represented the great international banking houses of New York that had directed the Bolshevik seizure of Russia. This lawyer, known as Louis Marshall (a good Scottish name!), was, as Prince Sturdza says, "a second Bernard Baruch, less conspicuous but just as influential as the famous proconsul of Judaism (rather than Jewry) in the United States." (A proconsul, it will be remembered, was in the Roman Empire a governor sent into conquered territory to direct and supervise the native governments, which were allowed some autonomy in local matters that did not directly affect the interests of the Empire.) Marshall, like other great potentates, disdained to play a comedy with the suppliant; he took Prince Sturdza to the window, pointed at Wall Street, and said with lordly bluntness: "Look what we can do for a country we like; in Russia we have shown the world what we can do to a country and government we hate." Prince Sturdza adds, "Mr. Marshall, a few days later, reiterated that statement to Mr. Gheorghe Boncescu, the Financial Adviser of our [Romanian] Legation [in Washington]." Marshall naturally thought it best to profess a liking for the United States, a country which he and his fellows were about to afflict with an "economic depression," neatly arranged by a squeeze through their banks, to ruin influential natives, appropriate their property through foreclosures, and create the atmosphere of crisis and poverty that would facilitate the "election" of their talented servant, Franklin Roosevelt.

‡The word brain-washing is "an English translation of a Chinese euphemism," according to an article by Professor Revilo P. Oliver in the Birch magazine, American Opinion, November 1964, pp. 29-40. This article is an excellent discussion of the whole subject in brief compass, and gives some telling examples of tricks used in public schools and newspapers, but unfortunately fails to treat the strictly scientific (psychological) principles of propaganda, which can (and indeed must) be used to create "public opinion" directly relevant to the Pitesti experiment described in the present book. It is not, however, a complete treatise, even in outline, of psychopolitics; it barely alludes to very important weapons of psychological warfare. We cannot digress to discuss those weapons here, but no one should overlook the efficacy of scientifically produced propaganda* in the United States, where it is virtually a monopoly of the Jews, who, through advertising, can control the ever diminishing number of newspapers, periodicals, and broadcasting stations that they do not own outright. The best strategic propaganda is pro-

in modern circumstances. The techniques of propaganda are no more "Communist" than rifles or airplanes; like all weapons, they work for whoever uses them, but do not hit the target, if they are not well aimed. In all wars, victory goes to the side that has the best weapons and uses them most expertly.

*The best technical treatises on the subject are in French: Jean Stoetzel, Esquisse d'une theorie des opinions (Paris, 1943), and Jacques Ellul, Propagandes (Paris, 1962). One cannot too much emphasize the fact, ignored by Professor Oliver and other American writers, that the techniques of propaganda, like the technology that makes possible television and computers, have no political or social content. The results that are obtained by means of a television station or a computer depend entirely on who uses it for what purpose. It is true that all technological advances place the people who are too stupid or lazy to use them at a hopeless disadvantage. A nation that neglected or refused to use airplanes, for example, would necessarily be defeated in war and disappear (except as a political fiction, if that suited the purpose of the conquerors), but that is not the fault of the Wright Brothers and General Sikorsky. The effectiveness of propaganda, in the strict sense of that word, depends largely upon what is technically called pre-propaganda, i.e., the ideas injected into the minds of children by their education. In the United States, the public schools were early converted into a very efficient machine to stunt the minds, pervert the morals, and destroy the self-respect of children, but the Americans seem pleased with the results, even after they have had a preliminary view of them in the unwashed derelicts, sexual perverts, drug-addicts, and crazed revolutionaries that their public schools are systematically producing at their expense. It seems likely, therefore, that the Americans no longer have either the intelligence or the will to resist their enemies, and will dumbly acquiesce in the fate prepared for them. Since the number of Americans who are still permitted to have liquid capital is very small, the ever increasing number of foresighted refugees who are fleeing from the United States to other countries is significant, though statistically small.

duced by manufacturing impassioned argument and violent controversy on "both sides" of a given question, so that the public accepts as unquestionable fact everything that "both sides" in the contrived controversy seem to take for granted.

Propaganda, if properly used, can always control a majority of a given population, but will always be ineffective against both the critical intelligence of independent minds and the faith of a religion that the propaganda line openly contradicts. Although the minds can usually be hired, and theologians can be employed to "modernize" the religion, there will always be troublesome exceptions, even after a century of strenuous effort. In the conquest of a country by psychopolitics, the exceptions must be put under physical restraint and either liquidated or made harmless imbeciles or, if possible, converted into useful zombies.

This is the problem with which the text of Brain-washing is principally concerned, and with particular reference to the United States, where naked terrorism through the government was impossible in the 1930's, and is not yet feasible, even today. The principles expounded in the text and the methods suggested are indisputably authentic: they are the standard Soviet application of the discoveries made in Russia, before the Bolshevik conquest, by Dr. Ivan Petrovich Pavlov, whose scientific talents the shrewd Bolsheviks were able to take over and put to their own use.† You will find the essentials stated in the text.

The "synthesis" of the textbook on psychopolitics recommends and prescribes for use against Americans a propaganda campaign for "mental health" to obtain from the stupid Americans acquiescence in legislation to authorize the "legal" kidnapping of troublesome Americans and their incarceration in prisons (to be called "hospitals") in which "trained psychiatrists" of alien origin and their brutish assistants can induce insanity, imbecility, or, if necessary, death by means of scientific tortures, especially "electric shock therapy" (which can be used to break the backbone), or mind-destroying drugs, such as the now famous L.S.D., which was only later produced by the Weizmann Laboratories in Israel and shipped to the United States for surreptitious sale to adolescents and children whose minds had been given a preliminary conditioning in the public schools.

In the 1930's, the "mental health" scheme would doubtless have seemed preposterous and ridiculous to the stolid and happy-go-lucky Americans, if they had heard of it. It has now, however, been almost completely implemented, and has already been used in a considerable number of cases, a few of which have attracted some little attention, especially that of the abduction of General Edwin A. Walker, which failed because he had prominent friends who acted before he could be destroyed, of Frank Britton, who had dared to criticize Jews and was effectively silenced, and of the journalist, Fred Seelig, who, through a miscalculation, was prematurely released and had time to narrate his experience in print before he died.* We may expect, however, that the procedure will be used with increasing frequency and less secrecy, and that soon it will be mere routine for Americans who make themselves obnoxious to their masters (for example, by claiming that the "United Nations" or the Federal Reserve System or the Marxist income tax is "un-Constitutional," or by pretending that God's People do not have a right to use lesser breeds for their own profit and fun) to be hauled to Springfield, Missouri, or some other equivalent of Pitesti on the western side of the Atlantic, and there, with "loving care," be restored to "mental health" as vertebrate vegetables.

*Frederick Seelig, Destroy the Accuser, with a foreword by Westbrook Pegler and a commentary by Dr. Revilo P. Oliver (Miami, Florida, Freedom Press, 1967). This book, which I have seen, has become unprocurable, and I do not have a copy at hand. The author is said to have died of heart failure in Valparaiso, Indiana, not long after his book was published, and a letter to the publisher was returned to me with the notation "unknown"! The book, as I remember, contained some details about the eagerness of the staff at Springfield to start torturing General Walker, who was kidnapped through the complicity of Federal judges (compare Judge Petrescu in Chapter XXVIII of the present book) while the author was a prisoner there.

Despite the panoply of refined techniques, such as surgical operations on the brain ("lobotomy"), excruciating electrical torments, and subtle drugs, it is noteworthy that even in the United States at the present time the favored procedure is to subject inconvenient Americans to a kind of physical degradation of the same kind as that used at Pitesti, though, for some reason, less intense and systematic. A typical case is that of the American journalist, who, having come upon evidence that compromised the nest of homosexual perverts in Washington, was kidnapped by a U. S. Marshal and hustled to Springfield, Missouri, where he was stripped and thrust naked into a small cell, of which the floor and three sides were of rough concrete, while the fourth was a ponderous steel door. There was no furnishing of any kind in the cell, and only two openings, one a round hole in the floor leading to a sewer, and the other a ventilator, through which were sent blasts of frigid air alternating with shrill, deafening, cacophonous, and rhythmically disoriented "music," intended both to damage the auditory nerves and to make sure that the poor wretch in the cell could not possibly fall asleep as he stretched his naked body on the rough concrete. Naturally, the victim's skin, abraded by the concrete, soon developed open sores, and his despairing mind eventually took refuge in periods of total stupor that even the howling din coming through the ventilator could not break. After being deprived of food and water for three days and nights, the victim was forced to obtain them by crawling on his hands and knees in minimum time to a pot placed on the sill of the briefly opened door.*

*The unfortunate journalist was almost certainly Frederick Seelig, but, for reasons stated in the preceding note, I have had to quote

In the United States it has thus far been necessary to use a certain amount of discretion and pretense in the destruction of anti-Communist nuisances, but in Romania, after the completion of the take-over, more effective secrecy made precautions less necessary.

The Pitesti experiment dispensed with such complicated and expensive paraphernalia as electrical apparatus, brain surgeons, and specially prepared drugs. It used only the simplest tools, everywhere procurable: clubs, the bestiality of degenerates, the weakness of human nature when attacked by Pavlov's methods. The results of the experiment were, as you will see, impressive and appalling. They proved that no one could resist the techniques of the Anti-Humans, but whether the experiment was entirely a success is a question that must be left to your decision on the basis of your estimate of what the experimenters hoped to discover or prove, while a critique of their methodology must be left to the few Occidentals who have expert knowledge of psychobiological processes.

What no reader of this book can fail to perceive, if only for a moment before he tries to forget the "unthinkable," is the unspeakably vile and sadistic lusts of the contrivers of the experiment at Pitesti — appetites so foreign to everything that he regards as human that the creatures who are animated by them can be described only as the "enemies of mankind," or, concisely, as the Anti-Humans.

What is described in this book happened in Romania after the Bolsheviks discarded the pretense that they were tender-hearted humanitarians bringing "equality" and "civil rights" to the downtrodden victims of the wicked "Fascists" and "anti-Semites." Before and even after the Anti-Humans stopped from the article in American Opinion, November 1964, p. 31, mentioned above. The writer of that article, Professor Oliver, does not give the victim's name, but the circumstances make the identification certain. One wonders how (or why) Oliver's article was printed in a Birch publication.

dissembling, some Romanians were, by foresight or good luck, able to escape westward, and even to make their sufferings known, as Mr. Bacu has done in this book, to peoples not yet imprisoned.

When the United States has progressed to the point reached by Romania in 1948, there will be no place on earth to which Americans can flee, and there will be no one to hear their screams.

All that remains to be said to introduce Mr. Bacu's book to American readers can be expressed in a few pages giving such information about Romania as will enable Americans to appreciate the human drama — the pathos and the tragedy — of this narrative.

Romania was for centuries, even while it was under the comparatively mild and humane oppression of the Moslems, the easternmost land of the West. The nation was born of the Roman conquest of Dacia (101-106), and there Rome left an imprint that has thus far been indelible and a spiritual heritage that survives in the heart of the people.

The civilization of Romania was the civilization of the West. The names of men and places may be unfamiliar to your eyes, but the people you will recognize as your own kind and their thoughts will be the thoughts of the Christian West.

There is, however, one peculiarity of Romania that requires some preliminary explanation, for it is the very opposite of what contemporary experience in the United States — and, for that matter, in most Western nations to varying degrees — makes us take for granted.

The persons whom the Bolshevik beasts selected for dehumanization were a clearly defined group: university students. That was because in Romania, in sharp antithesis to what we see in the United States today, university students were a highly respected elite and included men who combined the vigor and ardor of youth with unsurpassed patriotism and a lucid conservatism, intellectual and religious.

This fact, which will seem so paradoxical to Americans today, was the result of two concurrent factors.

Romania was essentially a land of peasants with limited industrial and commercial classes. The four universities, at Iasi (founded by Prince Cuza in 1860), Bucharest (founded in 1864), Cluj (1872) and Cernauti (1875), each divided into several faculties (theology, philosophy, letters, science, law, and medicine), were open to all who had completed their studies in a lyceum (liceu, translated 'high school' in the present book). The lyceum had relatively high standards, requiring, for example, the learning of French and German as well as either Latin and Greek or English and Italian, and weeded out the intellectually incompetent.* Only a small fraction, therefore, of Romanian youth entered the universities, and consequently a considerable prestige was attached to the very word student (i.e. university student, since a pupil in a secondary school was an elev). It suggested a considerable intellectual ability and a serious purpose, for the students in Romanian universities were, for the most part, the children of hard-working peasants or of earnest professional men; the scions of the wealthy more often than not went abroad for their education.

*Romanian children began the formal study of their first foreign language, French, in the year corresponding to the fifth grade in American public schools. By the time that they reached the point that corresponds to the first year of high school in the United States, Romanian children were reading Cicero in Latin and mastering trigonometry. Such progress is, of course, merely normal in serious educational institutions. The public schools in the United States, on the other hand, are designed to blight native intelligence and produce a nation of nitwits that can be easily manipulated and fleeced by professional "educators" and other shysters.

To this fact we must add a second, that will be even more astonishing to the American reader. The Romanian universities were as much centers of ardent patriotism and conservatism as American colleges, in the period of 1920-50, were centers of internationalism and socialism. The prevailing atmosphere of staunch conservatism also distinguished Romanian universities from other European universities. For this there were several reasons.

Romania was essentially an agrarian country and a large percentage of the studenti had had closer contact with the realities of life than was usual in Germany and France. More important, Romania was a small nation with a clear consciousness of its national individuality as a Western nation, tracing its origins to the Roman conquest of Dacia, and encompassed by peoples of Byzantine, Slavic, or Oriental traditions. It had stubbornly maintained that consciousness through centuries of alien domination, attaining a precarious and transient independence in 1600, only to fall again under the rule of the Turks. After numerous interventions by Russia, the enemy of Turkey, and after many episodes of valiant resistance to both Russians and Turks, Romania, formed by the union of Wallachia and Moldavia, gained autonomy in 1859, but remained under the suzerainty of the Turkish Sultan, and did not become fully and formally independent until 1881. Independence so recently attained and constantly threatened remained in the Romanian mind the precious guerdon of nationality at a time when the larger nations of Europe were taking themselves and their prosperous perpetuity for granted.

Romania, moreover, had Russia on its eastern frontier — Russia which, in 1812, had seized and annexed Bessarabia, a region containing a large population of Romanian blood. After the International Conspiracy captured Russia in 1917, Romanians could not fail to know what the beasts did in Russia and especially in Bessarabia. Moreover, it was the Romanian army that in August 1919 occupied Budapest and freed Hungary from the unspeakable vermin led by Israel Cohen, alias Bela Kun. The Romanians knew what Bolshevism was, and whence it sprang. In the United States, separated from the reality by thousands of miles and an infected press, many stupid or cunning professors could gabble about a "noble experiment" and a "people's regime," but in Romania such nonsense, so utterly at variance with observed reality, was recognized as either asinine or criminal.

To these considerations must be added another equally important. Although, as was to be expected, Romanian universities naturally tended to imitate the far older and venerable universities of the great European powers, especially Germany and France, there was a significant difference that limited the more deleterious aspects of that influence. The faculties of Romanian universities, especially Iasi and Bucharest, were predominantly composed of Romanians, whereas, of course, elsewhere in Europe university teaching had been invaded by large contingents of the international people. Before the Treaty of Adrianople in 1829, the Jews, for the most part, had ignored Romania, an impoverished land under Turkish rule, and had by preference swarmed into nations where the prospects of easy pickings from the natives were far more attractive.* After 1829, hordes of Jews came over the borders, but, despite various efforts by France and Germany to procure for these intruders in Romania the privileged status they enjoyed elsewhere, Jews were, for all practical purposes, debarred from citizenship until 1923, when the Romanian government then in office yielded to the pressures of the "great powers".† It

*A concise account of this aspect of Romanian history will be found in the opening chapters of L'Envoye de l'Archange by the distinguished French authors, Jerome et Jean Tharaud (Paris, 1939).

†Strictly speaking, Romania, coerced by a scarcely veiled threat of invasion by Germany and Great Britain, in 1879 repealed the article in her constitution which, like the constitution of the State of Pennsylvania that was framed and adopted under the thus happened that in Romania, unlike France and Germany, the universities were still largely staffed by men who in mind and spirit belonged to the nation, and they were not dominated by an alien race whose members can, with the facility of chameleons, take on the color of whatever the environment in which they choose to reside. In Romanian universities, therefore, patriotism was intellectually respectable, and, on the whole, taken for granted until 1918.

After 1918, although faculties remained largely Romanian, the situation became confused. Some professors seem to have been either bemused by the glib patter of Marxism, a "doctrine" cleverly designed to addle mediocre brains that can be fascinated by pseudo-intellectual verbiage, or intimidated by the Bolsheviks' boast that they represent a mysterious but irresistible "wave of the future." Many others, perhaps fearing for their comfort or lives, concealed their real sentiments and leadership of Benjamin Franklin, restricted citizenship to Christians. After 1879, the legal privileges of citizenship were available to all Jews, provided that they either (a) had served in the armed forces of Romania or (b) applied for such rights and were found on investigation not to be guilty of political or moral subversion and corruption. Naturally, only a few thousand thus obtained the legal status of citizens, and it was not until 1923 they could all swarm into Romanian politics and begin to take over the country "legally" by manipulating greedy politicians. Everyone knows that the Jews are, as they themselves frankly boast, an international race or "peopledom" who never become in fact citizens of the nations in which they find it profitable to dwell. As Albert Einstein said, "There is no such thing as a German Jew, Russian Jew, or American Jew: there are only Jews." Hundreds of the most accomplished and intellectually prominent Jews throughout the world have frankly said the same thing, and all the admitted Zionists have proclaimed it year after year, but, unaccountably, the people of the Christian West perversely refuse to believe them — and then secretly complain to one another in private that Jews are not good Christians and not good Englishmen or Americans. Although Europeans do understand that a European who lives in China is not a Chinaman, most of them have a curious mania to pretend that a Jew who resides in Europe is a European — and even a mania to punish other Europeans who will not join in the absurd pretense. The Jews, whose leaders have told the truth often enough, can scarcely be blamed for taking advantage of the folly of the peoples whom they despise and exploit.

remained silent or took refuge in ambiguous pronouncements. A few, however, fearlessly maintained Romanian traditions and asserted their intellectual integrity. They provided the inspiration for the patriotic and conservative movements among the university students.

The reaction of the students was doubtless hastened by a simple sociological pressur . The Jews, although they were numerically only a small part of the population even after the great influx at the end of the World War, swarmed into the universities and began to jostle out the natives. According to the official statistics, for example, in the spring semester of 1920 at the University of Cern u i there were enrolled in the College of Philosophy 574 Jews and only 174 Romanians; in the College of Law, 547 Jews and 234 Romanians. At the University of Iasi 831 Jews were enrolled in the College of Medicine as against 556 Romanians, and in the College of Pharmacy, 229 Jews and 97 Romanians.* These are, of course, some of the most striking disproportions, but everyone will see why, especially in such academic institutions, young Romanians, finding themselves a minority amidst a throng of pushing, versipellous, and disputatious aliens, and doubtless also often finding themselves eclipsed scholastically by the mental agility and Oriental subtlety of the Protean race, should have turned ardently to patriotic movements.

There was a further development that will be even more astonishing to the American reader. It may be that before the First World War in Romania, a largely peasant nation but recently emancipated from Moslem control, Christianity retained a greater vigor and commanded a more general piety than in other countries of Europe, though it would be difficult to make an accurate comparison between Romania and, for example, Brittany, Bavaria, or Piedmont. Romanian universities were, of course, profoundly affected by the intellectual climate of the great European universities and necessarily reflected the dominant attitudes of thought, from German "idealism" to the "religion of humanity" preached by Auguste Comte in his more lucid intervals; from the stern pessimism of Schopenhauer to the graceful and universal irony of Anatole France. To a very large extent the intellectual life of Europe was dominated by the attitude that Christianity was an historical phenomenon characteristic of an age whose passing one might view with joy, indifference, or regret, but which, whether for better or worse, was passing ineluctably away: religion was a waning superstition that still had power only over the uneducated. These currents of European thought necessarily affected educated Romanians, who, as a matter of course, read and wrote French fluently and, in many cases, German also.

Romanians will, no doubt, variously estimate the direct effect on their intellectual life of the dire and immediate menace of Bolshevism in the period that followed the First World War. Certainly all intelligent Romanians could see that their enemies were anti-Christian — were in both word and deed frantic enemies of the Western World, whose culture had for fifteen centuries been specifically Christian, and whose nations had been so distinctively set apart from others by their religion that they had been little conscious of the underlying racial unity of the West. In the 1920's, it must be remembered, Bolshevik propaganda was stridently anti-Christian, denouncing religion as "the opiate of the people," signaling its victories by massacring ecclesiastics, defiling shrines, and converting churches into stables or warehouses, and teaching militant atheism in its schools.* It was not until much later that the Bolsheviks could implement on any extensive scale their other and complementary technique of utilizing renegade ministers and priests to spread the germs of Bolshevism under the guise of a "social gospel" or "ecumenical Christianity." Until 1930, at least, the established Christian churches were almost universally regarded as a bulwark against the International Conspiracy. Furthermore, in 1919, the multitude of Jews residing in Romania, deeming a Bolshevik victory imminent, had prematurely and indiscreetly dropped their pretense and appeared openly as the instigators of "proletarian" riots and sabotage, and the suborners of violence and treason, not troubling to disguise their eager anticipation of a glorious butchery that would put the natives in their place. Thus the fundamental and necessary hostility between Christianity and the various doctrines of Judaism again made Christianity the symbol of Romanian nationalism as opposed to its foreign and domestic enemies.

*Hence the clich , "atheistic Communism," that is still used in many conservative circles in the United States. To recapture the patriotic outlook of the 1920's, the reader will do well to turn to R. M. Whitney's fundamental Reds in America (New York, 1924), in which accurate analysis of Bolshevik plans (including the plans for the "Civil Riots" agitation of the 1960's) accompanies an implicit confidence that Christian Churches will remain Christian!

In these circumstances, it was only to be expected that Romanian patriotic societies would be specifically Christian, but some, I suspect, used Christianity primarily as a symbol of their purpose. The first of the patriotic organizations was the Guard of the National Conscience (Garda Conștiinței Nationale), founded by Constantin Pancu, a simple steel-worker whom his fellows elected their leader, primarily to expose the nonsense of the "proletarian" propaganda with which the Bolsheviks were trying to confuse and utilize Romanian laborers — for the invariable but concealed Bolshevik purpose of ultimately reducing them to brutalized slavery.

In 1923, the National Christian Defense League (Liga Aparării Naționale Creștine) was founded by one of Romania's most distinguished scholars, A. C. Cuza, Professor of Law in the University of Iasi, with the discreet support of the internationally known historian, Prof. Nicolae Iorga, who is, perhaps, best known in the United States for his History of the Byzantine Empire, which has appeared in several English editions.* A league headed by scholars of such eminence naturally had great prestige among university students and educated men in general and it became a force of very considerable political importance, particularly after it merged in 1935 with the political party headed by Octavian Goga, prominent poet, litterateur, and statesman. Although the National Christian Defense League sought the support of the sincerely religious, its inner direction was rationalistic, basing its avowed hostility to Jews and Bolsheviks on historical and scientific grounds. From all that I can learn, Professor Cuza's creed was essentially the elegant scepticism of Renan. Professor Iorga's historical works treat Christianity with a cold objectivity. And Octavian Goga, if correctly quoted by Jerome and Jean Tharaud, seems to have held at heart a view of Christianity similar to that set forth in Nietzsche's famous Genealogy of Morals.†

The greatest influence over the Romanian students at this juncture was undoubtedly exerted by Corneliu Z. Codreanu, the son of a teacher in a Moldavian secondary school. Born 13 September, 1899, he prepared himself in law at the University of Iasi, where he studied under Professor Cuza, and he later studied abroad in both Germany and France. A man of iron will, exalted faith, and ardent patriotism, Codreanu, after participating in the Guard of the National Conscience from its inception and in the National Christian Defense League, founded on 24 June, 1927 the Legion of Michael the Archangel (Legiunea Arhangelului Mihail). The organization's

*Professor Iorga became Prime Minister of Romania for a time in 1931. An estimate of his conduct in office is beyond the scope of this notice. [His History of Roumania, translated by Joseph McCabe, was published in London in 1925. — Ed.]

†This sufficiently explains why there could be no cooperation between the Christian Defense League and Codreanu's Legion of Michael the Archangel, and it is not necessary to endorse the suspicions of Professor Cuza expressed by Ion Mota in an essay, "Legiunea si L.A.N.C.", in the volume Corneliu Codreanu, prezent (Madrid, 1966).

principles — an unlimited love of country, a code of personal honor and moral intransigence, the reciprocal loyalty of knight-hood, and rigorous subordination of body to spirit — were all based by the founder on an absolute faith in Christ. The Legion was “indissolubly united under the aegis of God” and its members pledged themselves to sacrifice themselves without limit or reservation for God and Country. This was the movement that by its high and noble idealism attracted to itself all the young elite of the Romanian universities, won their unqualified allegiance, and largely dominated the thinking of even those who stood aloof or opposed it.

This is why the Romanian university students were, in contrast to those of other Western nations, profoundly Christian. I have been assured by Romanians that in many cases the students’ firm religious convictions were shaped not so much by their families or by their churches as by the inspiration of Codreanu and the rigid Christian discipline he imposed on all his followers. There can be no doubt but that, from a strictly religious point of view, Codreanu’s movement represented the greatest and most intense revival of the Christian faith in any nation during the Twentieth Century. Its influence on the spiritual and intellectual life of the elite among young Romanians was enormous and transcendent. That is what makes the Legion unique among the nationalist movements of our age. The combination of ardent faith and intense nationalism produced a generation of heroes. The Legion, also known as the Iron Guard (Garda de Fier), sent an expeditionary force to Spain in 1936 to combat the international vermin there and earned the enduring gratitude of the Spanish people. And when the war with the Soviet began, the members of the Guard, taken from the prisons to which they had been sent by the Antonescu dictatorship in an effort to suppress their movement, formed the very flower of the Romanian army and were distinguished for their valor and devotion in all the actions of that war.

This is not the place to summarize, however briefly, the career of Codreanu* and the convulsed history of Romania after the precipitate and illegal return to that country of Prince Carol, a royal debauche who, after many offenses, had been disinherited and exiled by his own father. Carol, accompanied by a Jewish harlot to whom he was completely subservient, returned to Romania in 1930, dethroned his own son to reign in his stead, and, finding no other way to check the rising political power of the Iron Guard, overthrew the Constitution in 1938 and made himself dictator of Romania. Codreanu, arrested on patently false charges, was, together with thirteen of his lieutenants, taken from prison on the night of 29 November 1938 and, in the early hours of the next morning, murdered in the forest of Tancabesti at the orders of the royal degenerate.† Carol, with the support of the lords of

*For non-partisan and critical accounts of Codreanu’s career, see Paul Guiraud, Codreanu et la Garde de Fer (Paris, 1940), and the distinctly unsympathetic work by the brothers Tharaud, L’Envoye de l’Archange, cited above. Brief appreciations by his followers will be found in Vasile Iasinschi’s Facing the Truth (Madrid, 1966), and in two volumes of essays by various hands, Corneliu Z. Codreanu in perspectiva a douazeci de ani (Madrid, 1959) and Corneliu Codreanu, prezent (Madrid, 1966). On the significance of Codreanu and his movement in the history of Europe during the climacteric years that ended in what may have been the Suicide of the West, see the work of the distinguished diplomat and scholar, Prince Sturdza, cited below.

†The method of the murders was singular and remarkable. The fourteen men were taken in buses to the forest and there each of the men, who had been bound in an odd way, was strangled with a rope thrown over his head by a gendarme stationed behind him for that purpose. Then, to give some color to the official story that Codreanu and his ranking Legionaries had been “killed while trying to escape,” each corpse was shot in the back several times before it was thrown into the waiting grave. Prince Sturdza, in the Romanian text of his memoirs (Madrid, 1966; pp. 133 f.), asks the inevitable question: “Let us ask ourselves why there was that resort to strangulation, a procedure that was awkward and complicated in the circumstances, instead of a bullet in the back of the head, the simple and usual method and the obvious one to have used, since an hour later, to simulate an escape, the lifeless bodies were riddled with bullets.” (There is the further consideration that the bullet, unlike strangulation, would not have left the marks that were detected by autopsy international finance, ruled Romania by a combination of fraud and violence until September 1940, when the Iron Guard drove him and his Oriental leman from the country, and restored his son to the throne.

The gruesome murders in the dark forest of Tancabesti that night in November, 1938 were one of the fateful and decisive events of modern history. King Carol, who gave the orders, himself acted on the orders of his masters, the hidden and malevolent powers that, through their puppets in the governments of Great Britain, France, and the United States, were relentlessly herding the peoples of the West toward the catastrophic and fatal war that Germany was trying so desperately to avert. Carol's owners were, of course, the powers that had installed the Bolsheviks in Russia twenty-one years earlier, and the destruction of the Iron Guard, the only organized and formidable anti-Bolshevik force in Romania, left Carol free to carry out (as he did less than two years later) the plan to surrender Romania's fortified border in Bessarabia to the Soviet and thus open to the Communist hordes the passes into the Balkans and southeastern Europe.

King Carol's commitment to subject Romania to the Soviet as soon as the projected war began was, of course, known to the French government and doubtless in other circles even before he gave the orders for the murders of Tancabesti, which thus changed the strategic balance of Europe and were a preliminary to the dire and appalling disaster that was in fact, as when, after the flight of Carol, the bodies were exhumed and the officers who had carried out the murders under orders testified to what they had done.) Prince Sturdza then points out that the elaborate and peculiar way in which the victims were strangled corresponds in every detail to the method by which Jews are instructed to kill their enemies in a passage of the Talmud that he quotes (p. 134). Needless to say, this part of Prince Sturdza's book, like many others, was omitted in the heavily censored English translation cited in our footnote below.

Prince Sturdza has so aptly termed it, the Suicide of Europe.* It may even have been the decisive turning-point.

No diplomat and statesman of the Western world was more farsighted and sagacious than Prince Michel Sturdza, whose long career as an ambassador in many capitals of the Western world and corresponding contacts in the highest circles of many governments gave him excellent sources of information, while his personal position during the European disaster enabled him to observe and judge with a dispassionate lucidity *Prince Michel Sturdza wrote his brilliant analysis of the origin of the Second World War in French: La Bete sans nom — enquete sur les responsabilites (Copenhagen, 1944). Unfortunately he chose to publish his memoirs, which include a comprehensive study of the European catastrophe and are an absolutely indispensable source for all serious historians, in Romanian: Romania si sfarsitul Europei — amintiri din tara pierduta (Madrid & Rio de Janeiro, 1966). It is a misfortune that the observations of one of the wisest and most experienced diplomats of Europe — perhaps the only one who witnessed events from a peculiarly advantageous position, recorded them with philosophical detachment, and then was free to publish his book without being constrained by a need to apologize for himself or for a political party or government at the expense of historical truth — were written in a language that so few of our people can read. To make the work generally available, a wealthy American hired the John Birch Society to perform the technical work of supervising translation and printing and to distribute the book when it was published: The Suicide of Europe (Boston, 1968). The choice was unfortunate. The greater part of Prince Sturdza's book was accurately and even ably translated, although the material was drastically rearranged and often curtailed: for example, the concluding paragraphs of Prince Sturdza's text (p. 323 of the original) were reduced to a few lines and buried in a footnote at the bottom of page 23 of the English version. But the text was diligently censored to eliminate every statement, direct or indirect, that could offend the Birch Society's Jewish masters. A great many passages of historical importance were "lost" as the contents of the book were shuffled around, and in what was left, for example, the word evrei ("Jews") is almost invariably translated as "some people" or "certain individuals," wherever it could not conveniently be ignored. And, naturally, a long passage was interpolated to commend and advertise the Birch business. But even in this mutilated form, The Suicide of Europe is a very valuable book and must be recommended to everyone (except the few who can read the original) who wishes to understand the age in which we live.

that could scarcely have been attained by even the intelligence services of the great nations that were destroying one another in the interests of their common enemy. Honest historians must therefore accord great weight to Prince Sturdza's conclusion that:

It was Codreanu's murder that prompted Hitler to a radical tactical change in his foreign policy — a change loaded with the most fateful consequences not only for Germany but for the entire world of Western Civilization... Hitler made two speedy decisions: The first was of military character, the occupation of Czecho-Slovakia... The second was a bold political decision... he would negotiate an understanding and an economic arrangement with Soviet Russia.†

By this estimate, Corneliu Codreanu, although he could not have known or even imagined it, carried with him the destiny of generations then living and yet unborn, and the crowned hireling whose hand struck him down was, although his clotted mind could not have guessed it, one of the most pernicious traitors of all time. By any estimate, Codreanu was a great man.

The most eloquent attestation of the nobility of Codreanu's character and the purity of his religious faith is the deep ven-

†The Suicide of Europe, pp. 120-23; in the original, pp. 137 f. These two sudden shifts of policy made it seem to the rest of the world that Germany had acted in bad faith at Munich and that even its opposition to the Soviet was insincere; that certainly facilitated the work of the international lords who finally forced on the West the suicidal war which, as the British historian, H. R. Trevor-Roper candidly admits, "Hitler would have done anything to avoid." By far the most complete and accurate study of the complicated diplomatic manoeuvres and intrigues that were needed to start that war is the carefully documented treatise by Professor David L. Hoggan, which, since it has been mysteriously "delayed" by the American publisher who had it set in type many years ago, is thus far available only in the German translation: Der erzwungene Krieg (Tubingen, 1963). Much less complete, but valuable, are the late Professor Charles Callan Tansill's Back Door to War (Chicago, 1952) and Professor A. J. P. Taylor's The Origins of the Second World War (New York, 1962). The facts are indisputable, but many Americans believe that the devastation of Europe and the slaughter of millions of Europeans was admirable because it pleased Jews.

eration for him and loyalty to his memory felt by his surviving followers. Thirty years after his death, twenty years and more after failure and the loss of their country, they are exiles in foreign lands and menaced even there by the ubiquitous power of the anti-humans and the ever accelerated conquest of the Western world by its furtive enemies. But for their Captain and his vision they still feel the devotion that twenty-nine Romanian writers express in their contributions to the recent volume, Corneliu Codreanu, prezent.

The students of Romania, patriots and Christians, were selected by the anti-humans as victims of the process described in this book, not so much because they were the objects of the beasts' most venomous hatred, as because they provided material for an experiment that would confirm the universal validity of a technique that the world conquerors had elaborated long before and thus far used with uniform success. The anti-humans rightly judged that if the courageous and devoted youth of the Iron Guard, exalted by the most ardent Christian faith, could not resist the application of a fiendish science, no humans could ever resist.

That is what makes this narrative so tragic.

The Legion took its motto from Seneca: "He who is willing to die need never be a slave." Aye. But what of those who are not permitted to die?

FOR MY LEGIONARIES

Salut pe cei ce merg
pe drumul divinității
Legionari. Corneliu Z. Codreanu
1935

The Legionary Movement in Romania, commonly known as the Iron Guard, —perhaps the oldest anti-Communist movement in the world, still alive—was founded by Corneliu Z. Codreanu in 1927. For My Legionaries (353 pp., pb., $8.00), Codreanu's stirring work, is a complete and authoritative account of the ideals and principles of the Legionary Movement which shaped the character of young Romanians before WW II. Control over the communications media and the normal channels of book distribution by our international enemies makes it impossible to reach the broad market this unique book deserves. We are certain that the rapidly deteriorating political conditions will preclude a second edition, and For My Legionaries will soon become a collector's item. This book also provides the 'missing pieces' of the drastically censored The Suicide of Europe by Prince D. Sturdza; the identity of those who masterminded Romania's takeover and who are now engaged in carrying out the same program in the U.S. will no longer be unknown to you. ("Solzhenitsyn would appear to have not the slightest inkling of who conquered HIS country!"—B.C.)

THE ANTI-HUMANS

by D. Bacu (307 pp., hb., $8.00), describes what was done to the young men whom Codreanu inspired, when, seven years after his brutal murder, Romania was delivered to the Bolsheviks. They were subjected to what is the most fully documented Pavlovian 'experiment' on a large number of human beings. It is likely that the same techniques were used on many American prisoners in Korea and Vietnam. The Anti-Humans is a well-written document of great historical and psychological importance. Reading it will be an emotional experience you will not forget. ("A sequel to Orwell's 1984"—R.S.H.; "A searing expose of red bestiality!"—Dr.A.J. App).

THE EDUCATION OF A CONSERVATIVE

REVILLO P. OLIVER

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Dr. Revilo Pendleton Oliver, Professor of the Classics at the University of Illinois for 32 years, is a scholar of international distinction who has written articles in four languages for the most prestigious academic publications in the United States and Europe.

During World War II, Dr. Oliver was Director of Research in a highly secret agency of the War Department, and was cited for outstanding service to his country.

One of the very few academicians who has been outspoken in his opposition to the progressive defacement of our civilization, Dr. Oliver has long insisted that the fate of his countrymen hangs on their willingness to subordinate their doctrinal differences to the tough but idealistic solidarity which is the prerequisite of a Majority resurgence.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE

On the 18th Amendment (Prohibition): "Very few Americans were sufficiently sane to perceive that they had repudiated the American conception of government and had replaced it with the legal principle of the 'dictatorship of the proletariat,' which was the theoretical justification of the Jews' revolution in Russia."

On Race: "We must further understand that all races naturally regard themselves as superior to all others. We think Congoids unintelligent, but they feel only contempt for a race so stupid or craven that it fawns on them, gives them votes, lavishly subsidizes them with its own earnings, and even oppresses its own people to curry their favor. We are a race as are the others. If we attribute to ourselves a superiority, intellectual, moral, or other, in terms of our own standards, we are simply indulging in a tautology. The only objective criterion of superiority, among human races as among all other species, is biological: the strong survive, the weak perish. The superior race of mankind today is the one that will emerge victorious—whether by its technology or its fecundity—from the proximate struggle for life on an overcrowded planet."

buy up for a trifle in sound money much of the property of the deliberately starved Germans. In Hungary, which had been made independent of Austria, the Jews carried out a revolution in conformity with their racial instincts, with results that are vividly described by Cecile Tormay, whose eye-witness report was translated into English as An Outlaw's Diary (London, Allan, 2 vols., 1923), which was reprinted in the United States as a paperback some years ago. The Jewish terror was suppressed by a Romanian army, which aided the Hungarians under Admiral Horthy to regain possession of their country. The great Admiral became regent of a kingdom in which he thought restoration of the Hapsburgs would be premature, but he took no effective action against the swarms of Jews, who became outspokenly "anti-Communist" after the failure of their kinsmen's reign of terror and remained deeply entrenched in all lucrative segments of Hungarian economy.

In the period between 1918 and 1939 there were in most European nations (including Britain) national movements, more or less effective, which sought to restrict the dominion which the Jews, under various guises, covertly exercised over the nation's internal and external affairs. There were only two which need be mentioned here.

In Germany, the genius of Adlf Hitler created, by a candid appeal to the healthy instincts of the Aryan population, the National Socialist Movement, which attained a bloodless triumph, made the nation independent, and gave it a prosperity and sane morality that excited the envy of less viril Aryans. So great were the racial energies thus released that Germany, with an area less than two-thirds that of Texas, and fantastically outnumbered by the muddle-headed Aryans whom the international race incited, together with virtually the rest of the world, to attack her, withstood and almost vanquished her crazened enemies and their masters by a national heroism unequalled in human history. Her tragic defeat in 1945 consummated the Suicide of Europe, which may prove to have been the suicide of Western Civilization and the race that created it.

In Romania, a movement to restore the country to Romanian control was led by another man of genius, Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, and is generally known as the Iron Guard, although, for the greater part of its existence, it was officially known as the Legion of St. Michael the Archangel. It failed to attain effective power, largely because the King of Romania, the degenerate Carol II, was a weak-minded puppet, easily manipulated by his Jewish concubine and her compatriots. It is always hazardous to speculate about what might have been, but it can be argued that if a large part of the Romanian people had not felt a sentimental loyalty to the dynasty under which Moldavia and Walachia had been really united to form an independent nation, Codreanu might have been able to seize power by a resolute action which would then have become feasible.

The two anti-Jewish movements differed fundamentally. Although the
January 1985

Hitlerian régime took no measures against the Christian cults in Germany and even tolerated subversive agitation by the professional holy men, its basis was a philosophical awareness of the crucial importance of biological science in human life and hence of the innate differences between races, with the underlying assumption that Aryans should in fact be governed by Aryans.

In Romania, Codreanu's Legion was overtly and explicitly Christian, and its opposition to Jewish dominance had a religious basis, the antithesis between Christianity and Judaism that is expressed in some parts of the "New Testament" and was elaborated by many Fathers of the Church before the fall of the Roman Empire.

One consequence of the disastrous victory of the Jews' subjects in Britain, France, the United States, and other lands was the occupation of Romania by the Soviets, to whom the Jews' stooges delivered a hegemony over the greater part of Europe. By some cautious preliminaries and subterfuges, the Jews, riding on the shoulders of their Slavic lackeys, returned to power in Romania and proceeded to take vengeance on their opponents. One example of their revenge on the survivors of Codreanu's Legion was the experiment in the alteration of human intelligence and behavior that was described by D. Bacu in a book of which an excellent English translation, The Anti-Humans, may be obtained from Liberty Bell Publications.

The translation is preceded by an introduction by Warren B. Heath, which is reprinted in this issue of Liberty Bell. □ first and the new editions of my Conspiracy or Degeneracy?, has sent me a photocopy of a column written by the last of our honest journalists, her friend, the late John J. Synon; and published in many of the newspapers that subscribed to his column. Unfortunately, she has lost her notation of the date on which it was published, but internal evidence indicates some time in 1971.

This column, which tells the simple truth about the song and the "hate-filled harridan" who wrote the words, should never be forgotten. It is reprinted below.

JULIA WARD HOWE'S BATTLE HYMN OF HATE

JOHN J. SYNON

Whenever I hear a Southern voice or a Southern band giving vent to that despicable Battle Hymn of the Republic I wince. And then I wonder. I wonder if the renderers are plain stupid or if they are maliciously anti-South.

That song is the most venomous ever written. The heart of it, if you will listen to its words, expresses the determination of its author to destroy Southern people. And yet, today, Southern bands—public-school bands, mostly—are to be heard thumping away at the malign thing. I heard it twice, last January, during George Wallace's inaugural parade.

Recall its phrases: "...(W)e will trample out the vineyards where the grapes of wrath are stored"... "let us die to make men free"... "as we go marching on".

Those "grapes of wrath" are you, my friend, if you are a Southern person, you are the one to be trampled.

Let me tell you the story.

Julia Ward Howe, the biddy who wrote those lyrics, was a queer admixture of sex, piety, poetry, reform, and busybody. As such, she was the quintessence of a Victorian breed of cat indigenous to the North during the middle years of the Nineteenth Century. Such as she were known as Abolitionists and they were responsible for more "trampling" than any sect in this nation's history.

The war of Northern Aggression began in April of '61. Some seven months later this roving eyed woman was to be found in Washington, whisking in and whisking out of this soldier's tent and that: At age 42, Julia Ward had come down from her Boston home to "minister" to "the boys."

Between "ministrations" she holed up at the Willard hotel and there—there or in some tent or another, the evidence is not clear—one November night, that first year of the war, she put her feelings to paper. The thought behind her words has been marching ever since.

The composition, itself, is strictly second-rate-stuff—as, indeed, was Julia—and had there been only words, it is likely once her "poem" was published, that would have been the end of it. But there was the music, too, and that was different. It is a stirring martial melody. And so, piggy-back, stirring music has kept alive Julia Ward Howe's words of hate.

Oddly enough, nobody knows who wrote the tune. Like the Ministering Angel, herself, the music has a clouded history. So far as I can learn, it was first known as a Methodist hymn, Brother Will You Meet us? Later, as Hallelujah.

Sumter had been fired on the preceding April. Perhaps a month after that, in May, at a flag-raising ceremony at Fort Warren near Boston, the old hymn was sung to different words. The new lyrics honored a recently-departed victim of a straight-shooting Confederate. As a patriotic, war-time tune, it caught on. That version became known as John Brown's Body (not the John Brown of Harper's Ferry infamy). Months later, somebody replaced John Brown with Julia's "poem" and there we have it.

I offer the true significance behind today's use of the song is to be seen in the fact that it is not sung under its original words or title but as The Battle Hymn of the Republic.

Such is the legacy of a hate-filled harridan; her spleen goes marching on.

None of this information is obscure. I am as confident as I can be the recent resurgence of the tune was an inspired resurgence. And I am equally confident those creepy little vixens in our Southern public schools who teach it to their students do so with malice aforethought. Believe me, we've got a passel of weevils working our corn meal.

So, next time you hear the repulsive thing, ask whoever is in charge if they know its significance. When they deny such knowledge, tell them the story I have told you and watch their "surprised" reaction, Suggest they try Dixie.

Observe their reaction then. □

Survival manual for the White race

William Gayley Simpson has spent a lifetime of keen observation, careful analysis, and deep reflection developing the principal thesis of his book: that the single, undying purpose of all human activity should be the ennobling of man. In support of this thesis he looks at the foundations of Western Society, at the structure of our government, at the effects of technology and industrialization on man, at the roles of the sexes, at economics, and at race. The book goes to the roots of the problems facing the White race today, and it shows the ways in which White society must be changed if the race is to survive. WHICH WAY WESTERN MAN? is an encyclopedic work whose conclusions can be ignored by no one with a sense of responsibility to the future. # Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

30 November 1984

The "Nazi" witch hunt continues.

Jews, in Russia under Stalin, are said to have massacred millions of Ukrainians. We all know that they killed tens of thousands of Palestinians and a few hundred Englishers in the Mideast.

Do you have any leaflets describing Jewish war crimes and asking the American government to hunt down these criminals IN ISRAEL and in the United States? No doubt, quite a number of them have moved to Israel or come to the United States since Stalin's time.

Sincerely,
O.L.B., California

Dear Mr. Dietz:

1 December 1984

Your idea of preaching the Yahweh racket might not be such a bad idea, if you could come up with a good actor like the Falwells, Grahams, Robertsons, et al. They rake in quite a few millions a year and have unlimited sucker trade to con. These people are already too far gone to be much use to our side and what couldn't you do with a few million syphoned off each year like the amounts the Yahweh racketeers syphon off to Israel. All you have to say it is for God and you can make a mint.

Also, some time ago Professor Oliver suggested that we put up candidates that would join the traitors and if we could vote as a united group without asking questions when they got Congress, they could lower the boom. I think this is an excellent idea and suggested it to some groups 25 years ago, but I guess they are afraid they might actually win the war, so they couldn't consider it. All we need is 500 to 600 dedicated and extremely intelligent and crafty (a la Huey Long style) to promise the degenerate boobs everything (use the enemy's money and get elected) then, when strong enough, pull out all the stops. It could be done, but I doubt we could round up 500 or 600 loyal-to-the-death types that wouldn't turn their fellow patriots in if the price was right.

There are so many ways we could use the enemy's tactics against them if we only had the personnel intelligent enough to do it.

Keep up the good work!

Sincerely,
J.F. Montana

Dear George:

26 October 1984

I have recently finished distributing those 3000 envelope stuffers and stickers I ordered earlier in the year all over the place, on public bulletin boards, on mail box covers, through open car windows, on bus seats, stuffed in discarded newspapers, through the junk mail return envelopes, person to person, etc. etc. I have shown several people copies of the Liberty Bell to read, also. This activity took all summer long and I certainly hope you have been rewarded with at least a few book and journal orders!...

I have just returned to the typewriter to conclude this letter after opening today's mail and I am distressed to find your October 18 appeal that accompanied the somewhat belated September issue of the Liberty Bell. I am truly sorry that once again financial resources have declined. I am amending my previous contribution to run through the end of the year and want you to bill me quarterly for $20 beginning in 1985 and thereafter. I hope your readers will do their part, too, as Liberty Bell MUST NOT FOLD! It is an invaluable source of information obtainable NO OTHER WAY! My check for the following order and contribution through December 1984 is enclosed.

Very truly yours,
G.H., New York State

Dear George:

27 November 1984

Taps for Liberty Bell?—I hope not. You have filled a niche in the on-going racial struggle, George, and none are apparently in line to fill the void should you cease publication. I am enclosing my check for an extension of my current subscription. I would like to make a few observations, so now is the time to take the check and chuck the letter!

First, National Socialism or the New Order, is an on-going movement. We who believe in and shape our lives by the concepts of a racial community must have new concepts, new ideas with which to see the struggle through into the coming century. You must encourage and even seek out new writers with fresh ideas; we can see the weakness of our current propaganda efforts by the lack of followers flocking to our ranks. The Liberty Bell must become the organ for our expanding horizons. As The National Socialist is no longer being published, at least I don't see it in my mail anymore, someone must become the journal of the intellectual voice of the racial community. That is your role, George, if you have the strength, both financial and emotional, to see it through.

Secondly, the NSDAP was a product of Germany of the 1920-1930 time period. It is not, in its entirety, applicable to today's political realities. It is an excellent guide, the party provides a working blueprint of success as valid then as today, but the tactics must be adjusted. We can thrill at the lofty racial concepts of The Leader, der Fuehrer, as we can use them, adapt them them, but they must, in many cases, be altered to today's situation, a concept which Adolf Hitler certainly understood. Let the Liberty Bell become the proving ground for the concepts which will enlarge our movement.

We do not have to rely upon the research of the 1930s to make a case for racial purity, we do not have to look to the German labor movement, education, entertainment, professional life, etc., to find the overwhelming influence and domination of the Jew. It is here, today. We cannot live in the past. The past is dead, we must salvage what is worthwhile to today's struggle from our now fallen comrades and carry the banner onward. Die Fahne hoch!

Mit deutschem Gruss!
F.J., California

Dear George:

30 November 1984

Back in 1933, when I was 16, I remember the stillness that prevailed throughout the house on Sunday afternoons when Fr. Coughlin was to be heard broadcasting from The Shrine Of The Little Flower. Nobody was allowed to make a sound. My father was a devout Coughlin follower and an indefatigable worker for Social Justice.

For me, it was at this time that I first became aware of the Jewish problem. I remember writing a school paper on the Federal Reserve System.

From those days on I was interested in world affairs and I suppose I have been involved in just about every so-called right wing, conservative, patriotic movement since, beginning with the America First Committee to keep the U.S. out of World War II through the Goldwater and Wallace farces. I have subscribed to everything from The Cross and The Flag, Common Sense, American Mercury, the Greater Nebraskan, The South African Observer, to American Opinion, the Dan Smoot Report, Spotlight, Instauration and half a dozen other current publications including Racial Loyalty, The Thunderbolt and the Liberty Bell.

I have read extensively for over forty years on the Jews, genetics, anthropology, politics, religion, history, the occult, astronomy, geography, and just about anything else you can think of that has anything to do with life on this planet and the problems that beset the white man.

I have heard speakers by the dozen talk, talk, talk at meetings where about the only thing that was accomplished was "meetin', eatin', and retreatin'," as the saying goes. The only speech that really impressed me was given by Revilo P. Oliver, one of the few men in this country that I know of who really tells it like it is.

I have belonged to so-called conservative groups like the John Birch Society, but I have withdrawn membership in all of them for basically the same reasons: most are completely blind to the Jewish menace and all are unable to see the destructive influence of superstition (religion, by whatever name you choose to call it) on the white race, and few are even remotely interested in the racial issue which is of paramount importance. Aside from this, every one of these would-be savior groups is at swords points with each other; they will not stick together.

All of which brings me to the point I have in writing this letter, which I hope you will receive in the belief that it is written and meant to be constructive and in the best interest of our cause.

I was saddened to see Ben Klassen's materials deleted from your recent catalogs, for whatever reason, as I believe his approach to our problem is one of the best yet advanced, if not the best. While I personally do not agree wholeheartedly with his Salubrious Living thesis, I can find little fault with the basic tenets of his Nature's Eternal Religion or those of The White Man's Bible. Any hard-hitting plan of positive action is of far more importance than quibbling over what one or more of us believes ought to go into someone's stomach.

I personally believe there is a need for all of us white men, Creators, Odinists, Alliancers or whatever of basically anti-Jewish-Nigger-Mongrel persuasion a need, an urgent need for ALL of US to unite against THEM.

Very truly yours,
H.R., New York State

* * * * *

Dear Mr. Dietz:

30 November 1984

Thank you for printing Ben Klassen's letter of August 7, 1984. A reply is printed from Ronald Hand, but the letter is dated the second of August, 1984. Was that a typographical error for the 12th? [Indeed, it was! —Editor]

The reason the racist white movement is not flocking to Ben Klassen and knocking down his door is the man's personality, and his bombastic, arrogant ignorance; his "village atheist" attitude, if you will. There is no philosophical content in his books worth mentioning to appeal to anyone with either intellect, refinement, or sensitivity. There are a number of historical errors and many oversimplifications in his "Nature's Eternal Religion." He copycats the Bible's dogmatism, evidently thinking that the superior white race is incapable of thinking in any other than dogmatic, authoritarian terms. The very fact that he chose to make his book a "bible" reflects an ego problem, and his title, "Pontifex Maximus," which I thought he must have picked either out of defiance or out of waggish humor, has now been forcefully brought to my recognition as the kind of arrogance that one associates with the founder of a cult. Is Moon any less dogmatic than Klassen? Klassen praises the endless achievements of the white race, but he is really talking about the accomplishments of only the highest one per cent of the race's great individuals.

After all the talk about the white man's superiority, Klassen treats him as if he were nothing but a sheep, and must be approached on the "draw 'em a picture" kindergarten level. Klassen went to a lot of work writing his books, I'll give him that much credit, but they are not original in their thinking. He has borrowed extensively in his ideas, but where are his footnotes, references, quotations or proofs of his assertions? Just one example: He claims that Mohammed's wife, Fatima, was a Jewess, not an Arab woman. Proof? None. Just his assertion. She was rich, so that makes her a Jewess?

Klassen takes a lot of swipes at the Odinist religion in his characteristic tarbrush smear style. For instance: "I would choose the Greek or the Roman gods ten to one over the Viking's. Their stories are much richer in classic lore, mystique, wealth of characters, and any other technique that may tickle your fancy. Compared to them, the Vikings were crude, brutish, and bordering on the dense. In fact, on the intellectual level the Vikings were on a similar level to Hagar the Horrible as portrayed in the Sunday comics." So why didn't Klassen tell us this in his bible? He gets so emotionally excited that he includes the Norse religion among the classic religions, (otherwise, how could the Roman and Greek tales be so much richer?!)

Let us assume, with tongue in cheek, that Klassen really knows what he is talking about, and has actually read any Norse mythology since he was ten years old.

Terry Oaks said it well when he remarked that the Norse gods differ from all others (including the gods of the savage peoples of Africa and Oceania) in that they do not require any obeisance or propitiation. There is no "master-slave relationship" between the Germanic gods and their worshippers. Odinists see their gods as friends rather than as supernatural beings.

I am sure we can all name several dozen famous men who have advanced our civilization, even if we were to choose just the last 200 years. These men are white racial heroes. Do we worship them? No, but we admire them, extol them, and wish to emulate them. So what is the difference? The Norse gods are more archetypal in that they are less individually delineated, and that they symbolize either an attitude, a life-style, or a concept which is a racial composite. The Norse gods are heroes because they are mortal—they die after having successfully accomplished the destiny for themselves which was self-chosen. In other words, like men, they could have failed. The One High God, as the Greeks and the Romans called him, (and Paul of Tarsus mocked in the Acts of the Apostles as the "Unknown God") was called by our ancestors, All-Father, the great one who created the universe and its laws, and was far above all the gods and demi-gods. The concept of Yahweh was blasphemous to the white nations of the north, because it identified the tribal god of the Jews with the One High God, the "Ancient of Days." (Why do you suppose the Jews are always downgrading our great men? Because they know our psychology better than we do.

The Aryan race's superiority stems from its thinking, and that thinking was developed in religious and social concepts of dignity, pride, freedom, and individual responsibility. Only the religion of our folk could have endowed our ancestors with such a culture, and for Klassen, who can claim to be descended from these people, to pour scorn on the true, ancient religion of his forefathers, is inexplicable to me. Is the man so confused that he cannot distinguish between Christianity and its effect on our race, and our race's own inherent virtues?
